Figure 1.12 Each of the three 100-square-foot vegetable terraces is planted intensively to get the most produce from a small area. The dense plantings are aided by fertile topsoil, compost, and by reflected light from the flagstones.
